Abstract

Sensis Search, a young entrepreneurial dot-com launched in 2004, is the first mover in redefining the Australian search market and creates a new paradigm for Internet searches that delivers relevant, quality local, and global results. This chapter focuses on exploring the experiences of Sensis Search and identifying key issues of its operation. Data for this qualitative case study was collected mainly from two primary sources: (i) a documentary research into Sensis' business reports, online newsletters, memos, agendas, and other official publications, and (ii) an in-depth interview with a senior manager of sensis.com.au. The case study illustrates how Sensis has been managed, how it has succeeded, and what lessons can be learned from its experience.

Introduction

In 2002, Sensis Pty Ltd was launched as a new corporate brand and company name to replace the Pacific Access Pty Ltd, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Telstra Corporation, Australia's largest telecommunication company. According to the CEO of Sensis, the name of the company Sensis reflects the essence of today's business — keeping people in touch through appealing to the key human senses of sight, sound, and touch, using different media — print, voice, online, and wireless (Sensis, 2002). To strengthen the strategic position of Sensis in online advertising business, the company acquired CitySearch Online and BMC Media Ad Sales, adding new lines of advertising business to Sensis. After two years' operation driven by an aggressive growth strategy, Sensis has developed into one of Australia's leading advertising and search companies, offering a suite of print, online, voice, and wireless products designed to bring buyers and sellers together any time, anywhere. Sensis Pty Ltd has a team of over 3,100 employees, among whom 2,300 are directly employed by Sensis and 800 by its wholly-owned subsidiary the Trading Post Group of companies.
