Journal of Cases on Information Technology

An official publication of the Information Resources Management Association!

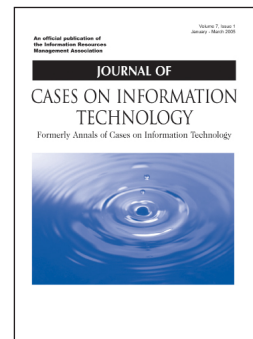

In every discipline, one of the most powerful tools in the hands of educators, researchers and managers is documented case studies based on experiences of others. This is particularly true for information systems educators and professionals. Case studies are tremendous sources of solutions, knowledge, ideas and lessons related to the utilization and management of IT in modern organizations throughout the world.

MISSION:

JCIT is an international refereed journal whose mission is to provide understanding and lessons learned in regard to all aspects of information technology utilization and management in modern organizations. The primary mission of cases published in this journal is for teaching purposes both in undergraduate and graduate IS courses. JCIT also strives to publish cases that can be instrumental to IS managers to learn from the success and pitfalls of other organizations related to IT utilization and management.

COVERAGE/MAJOR TOPICS:

- distance learning
- IT in libraries
- IT in government
- end user computing
- e-commerce technologies
- data management
- Web-enabled technologies
- and many, many more! Please see www.igi-global.com/jcit
